

Appointment, reappointment, formal appraisal, or promotion to Associate Professor and Professor

Section II-A-11(b), page 14

Corrections are highlighted in yellow.

"i. In the following situations the Chancellor's first assessment is considered preliminary and it triggers the 220 process (see II.A.12):

- If the Chancellor's preliminary assessment is negative in cases for seventh-year promotions to tenure, or
- If the Chancellor's preliminary assessment is negative in cases for reappointments, or
- If the Chancellor's preliminary assessment is contrary to the recommendation of the department, Dean or CAP.

In these cases the Chancellor makes the final decision after the completion of the 220 process.

ii. In cases where all reviewing bodies are negative for a non-seventh-year promotion to Associate Professor with tenure, promotion to Professor, appointment, reappointment, or fifth-year appraisals, the Chancellor's first assessment constitutes the final decision and a 220 process will not be initiated."

These corrections make the section above consistent with the following sections below:

Non-reappointment for Assistant Professors or Other Appointees of Equivalent Rank

Section II-A-12(c), page 16

Appraisal

Section II-B-5, page 17

Merit Advancement

Section II-B-9, page 19

Reappointment of Assistant Professors

Section II-B-13, page 21

In all these sections, it's stated that if the preliminary decision is not to reappoint, the procedures as outlined in APM 220-84 will be followed.
